Saturday 8th December sees our last ever party at the soul infused, disco floored venue of residency, The Key. The place where Need2Soul found its home and came alive. To cast a customary 'smash' farewell party, a stellar line-up has been carefully put together to make this a proper send-off.

In room 1, Joaquin 'Joe' Claussell, a constant and revered influence in the house scene, will be headlining. Dance music keeps its eclectic, raw nature when Joe plays, transporting his passion and soul through every single person on the dance floor. Alongside him is the underground soulful king of the UK, Benji B, delivering his unique and awe inspiring course of high calibre music. Blending tunes of sublimity, whether it is broken beat, hip-hop, house, garage, jazz, soul or Detroit techno. Starting off Rap Saunders will endeavour to get you moving as he did from the very beginning of Need2Soul's Key parties.

Sharing the headline in room 2 will be a European house DJ who never fails to fully represent the best deep house available, Steffen "Dixon" Berkhahn. A legend in his own right, Dixon has for the past decade insured the existence of a first-class house culture with his residencies in Berlin, productions, and the creation of Sonar Kollektiv sub label Innervisions. To rev Dixon up Ben Chapman's finely tuned ear will be selecting only the very best to get the room moving. Warming down, James Priestley from his pioneer dance party Secretsundaze, makes a guest appearance.
